RWGIF Institutional GBP Share Class CA vs iBoxx £ Corporates (IYDU)

As at 31 January 2024. This chart shows the relative performance in percentage terms between RWGIF Institutional GBP Share Class CA net of all fees since inception and the Markit iBoxx GBP Corporate Total Return Index (IYDU) over the same time period. Performance data quoted represents past performance; past performance does not guarantee future results. The investment return and principal value of an investment will fluctuate so that an investor's shares, when redeemed, may be worth more or less than their original cost. Current performance of the fund may be lower or higher than the performance quoted. Source: Bloomberg

Portfolio Strategy

The Fund invests in a diversified pool of high-yielding corporate bonds and preference shares issued in the main by listed large-cap institutions, and asset-backed securities. All the Fund's investments are listed on at least one major exchange. The Fund aims to deliver a gross income (ex capital appreciation), of 5.5% annually, either paid in semi-annual instalments or reinvested in the Fund at investors' discretion. The Fund's assets can be denominated in a number of different currencies but are predominantly in GBP, USD and EUR. Currency exposure across non-GBP assets is hedged back into GBP and non-GBP share classes are hedged back into their base currencies on a rolling monthly basis. The Fund may take on a limited amount of leverage via derivatives and may invest in large cap high-yielding equities, but currently exercises neither of these options.

Manager's Commentary

There was always a suspicion that the Santa rally in bond yields (less so in equities) was way overdone, and this has turned out to be the case. The 10yr Gilt closed 2023 at 3.42%, rose to 3.80% by the end of Jan, and now stands at 4.04% at the end of the first week of Feb. Similar if less pronounced moves have been observed in US Treasury & € Govt yields. Yes, there's been a strong down move in inflation but from a high peak, with inflation still proving "sticky" in various parts of the economy, not least the labour force. The US economy appears to be heading for the soft landing which most thought impossible to achieve and therefore prospects of meaningful near-term interest rate cuts have been dashed, all the more so as we're in an election year where the Fed will be naturally very cautious about making big policy changes. The case for interest rate cuts in the economically stagnant UK is probably stronger, but here too there's a certain amount of political risk attached to any major move from BoE, unless inflation continues to slide and hits 2%, in which case all bets are off.
